Does human leukocyte antigen gene polymorphism affect management of COVID-19 Patients? A review article

Published On: August 29, 2020 | Pages: 001 - 003

Author(s): Mohamed Ahmed Raslan, Mona Alshahawy, Eslam Mansour Shehata and Nagwa Ali Sabri*

New corona virus disease (COVID-19) is a recent worldwide pandemic occurred as a result of SARS-CoV-2 virus, where, it spreads mainly through large respiratory droplets, and probability of other routes of transmission do exist, due to the suspicion of the viral abundance in feces and urine of affected individuals [1]. The transfer and transmission of COVID-19 is high ...